

In addition to what has already been mentioned, another realistic idea of the environment and working conditions in mines comes from a true to life construction of a section of an underground gallery, built by ex-miners.

